AT THE BOWER'S ENTRY.

[Arnold's "Indian Song of Songs"]
Enter, twice-happy! enter, twice-happy!
And let the gates of Heaven be thrown open.
With the soul's desire to see from old Tremble not lay thy lovely hands aside; Lay it aside with those who enter in;
And love him with the love that knows not fear;

Be not a flower that changes; enter thou, Flower of all sweet and stainless womanhood!
Flower to grow bright, forever new;
Enter beneath the flowers, O flower-fair!
Beneath the flowers, O flower-fair!
And clasp, and wreath, and cling, with him
The heart's desire, the heart's desire!

Enter the love, O love!
Enter the love, O love!
And take and give the joy that heart grant!
Thy heart has entered, let thy feet go too!
Thy heart has entered, let thy feet go too!
Give him the drink of amrit from thy lips.

GWIN AND MCCORKLE'S DUEL.

After Tearing Each Others' Clothes a Startling Discovery Was Made.

[St. Louis Republicans.]
An event which excited national interest was Senator Gwin's duel with Congressman McCorkle. McCorkle represents a California district, and fell deeply in love at Washington with a Tennessee girl, but if he had any affection for her he was alienated by Mr. Gwin, who was a beautiful and accomplished woman, and a superb diplomat. McCorkle's animosity was aroused against Gwin in consequence, and the feeling between the two California representatives was so intense that the Washington paper at the time published a great deal about the affair. There was a duel one ship a month to the Pacific slope, and Gwin and McCorkle, although a hostile, went out home together. On board their relations were very stiff and chilly.

"When the ship touched at Santiago I went aboard and accompanied them to San Francisco. I was a friend of both men, and saw the whole thing about the duel between them. But as soon as we landed at San Francisco McCorkle challenged Gwin to a duel, and Gwin accepted it.

"Called on Gwin the day after the challenge, he was having heard that I had agreed to a duel. McCorkle, exclaiming "My God! may you, my old friend, going to turn against me? I assure him that I would take no part in the affair. The duel, however, interested me, and I presented myself at the duel. Finding they could not meet for the purpose, they decided to go to Monterey and have the duel at a place about fifteen miles out from the town.

"All the preliminaries being arranged for a week prior to the time of the encounter, each of the principals practically assisted with the rifle, and there were a number of spectators of the practice shooting. Each man, to his habit, it was a matter of course, to the other's practice, and thus got it all of the opponent's skill. Their shooting in these rehearsals was magnificent, and everybody thought that one or both of them would surely fall in the actual encounter.

"On the appointed day Gwin and Mc-Corkle, accompanied by their second and friend, repaired to the selected spot, and the dreaded duel was fought. They were fifty or sixty yards apart, and began with rifle. They fired each other's clothes, but after firing seven shots I drew no blood. This did not satisfy them, and they called for more ammunition. Then a discovery was made. The ammunition had been exhausted, and they were fifteen miles from Monterey and about 1,000 miles from anywhere else. It was plain that the duel was over for that day. In great distress, but still as venal as ever, the parties departed for San Francisco. A duel between McCorkle and Gwin were afterward adjusted. This duelling duel became a historical and one of the most famous in duelling annals.

"Gwin soon left California, and I never saw him afterward."
